

Reducing and Managing Athletes' Violence

We are a professional psychologists' team with a proven method to help college athletes manage risk and reduce sexual misconduct, bullying, and harassment behavior

With our approach your student-athletes will be able to:

- Increase respect and ethical behavior on-the-field and off-the-field
- Develop the three skills to increase empathy towards themselves and others
- Increase effective communication between players and coaches
- Create incentives for changing boundary violating attitudes and behavior
- Increase team-building and collaboration
- Develop bystander awareness strategies and interventions

And we can help to protect your brand from lawsuits and media devaluation

Startling Facts about college athletes:

- Male student athletes comprise 3% of the college population yet represent 19% of sexual assaults and 35% of domestic violence perpetrators
- 36.8% of athletes are charged with assault vs. 8.5% of the general population
- 20% of college football recruits in the Top 25 Division I teams have criminal records
- Additionally, 20% of college women are victims of unwanted sexual assaults including 100,000 college women in the next year

Steven Dranoff, Ph.D. is a psychologist and psychoanalyst, clinician, teacher, researcher and author with 38 years of experience in the field. He is the founder of D&D Consultants, Inc., a national consulting firm that specializes in reducing bullying, sexual misconduct and violence in schools, colleges and corporations. He is the co-author of two award winning books on harassment ("The First Line of Defense," and "A Manager's Guide to All Forms of Harassment").

Contact:

Steven Dranoff Ph.D.

1111 Clifton Avenue, Suite 202,

Clifton, New Jersey

Tel: (973) 777-7333

E-mail: sdranoff@optonline.net